Physicians and Surgeons, 1888; post-graduate work Heidelberg, Berlin and Vienna, 1901-04; m. Helena J. Sessinghaus, June 9, 1891; 1 dau., Helen (dec.). With St. Louis U. Med. Sch. since 1905, prof. nervous and mental diseases since 1914, dir. of dept. since 1923. Classified human shoulder blades into convex, straight, concave and mixed types; determined primal origin of these types, racial distribution and the manner of transmission from generation to generation; presented evidence tending to show that the bearers of such types represent very largely the unduly disease susceptible, the plus-potentially sick, the shorter-lived of the race; summarized investigations in the Fourth Henderson Lecture (U. of Edinburgh, 1925) under the title "The Relations of Shoulder Blade Types to Problems of Mental and Physical Adaptability." Mem. A.M.A., St. Louis Med. Soc., Am. Coll. Physicians, Am. Neurol. Assn., Am. Psychiatric Assn., Alpha Kappa Kappa, Alpha Omega Alpha. Awarded, 1939, by St. Louis Medical Society, Certificate of Merit and gold medal for scientific accomplishment based on his classification of scapulae (shoulder blades) and other inherited characters, and his discovery of the "age-incidence principle of investigation."
